April 17, 2002 LB 1062

bad, because it doesn't matter. They've done the E & R work, but they can't finally do that work until the bill gets to them. The same is probably true...LB 1290 is not that long a bill, and the two bills that we moved yesterday that aren't on the agenda here but are under this Select File 2002 senator priority bills, LB 952 and LB 1185, if you get to them, they need work as well. They're going to...it's just mechanically going to take time. So figure on, no matter where we stop, that you're going to add two and a half hours on, and the more bills that we add on the longer we'll be here. So, with that, I don't...I've probably been so confusing you're all going what in the world is he talking about? The rule of thumb here is there are certain bills that we probably need to get to this evening for amendments. As a practical matter, wherever that line is, add two and a half hours because that's what we need for turnaround time. So you can chuck everything else I've said, but that's the gauge that you'd have. If we would do everything that's on the list, because today is the last day to make any changes, and at our present pace that probably isn't possible, that probably would take us somewhere between three and three and a half hours to do. So, Mr. President, I don't know. I hope I punched in my turn in order of speaking and that I didn't go out of turn, but that's where we lie at this point in time. If there are certain bills, Senator Chambers, at this point, when we...if we were in the middle of session I'd say let the body do whatever they want to. Senator Chambers is at a point where he's talked about certain bills that he's not going to spend time on. There are other bills other people are going to spend some time on too. So, as a practical matter, we need to decide, one, how late do you want to stay? That...that's your call. But realize that if you're...if you adjourn and that stuff isn't back, today is the last day for changes. So we just need to work under that assumption that now is the last time. I don't know what arrangements or agreements are going to be made on the floor, but now is the time to do them mechanically so you have time to do it and get things back. I don't think it's real fair to our staff to have the E & R staff up there at eleven o'clock at night trying to do technical work and expect them to be absolutely correct, and that's who I'm trying to protect or at least articulate to you who we need to consider at this point. Thank you, Mr. President.
